Van Hoosen Dairy Farm

Van Hoosen Dairy Barn seeking original blocks for repairs

As part of the renovation of the Van Hoosen Dairy Barn, the historic Rochester Hills Museum is seeking glazed block for restoration and repairs. Manufactured by the National Fire Proofing Company, the brown glazed blocks are referred to as Natco Hollow tiles that measure 16" x 8" x 8". Though one of the Van Hoosen Barns was featured in an ad for the block in 1915, the original company no longer exists. "We want our renovation to be accurate and we want to use original block - whether another farm has a supply or if we can salvage them from another building. We will pick them up if someone can let us know of a supply - we will take any amount we can get," said museum manager Patrick McKay in a press release. To contact the museum, call 248-841-2671 or email rhmuseum@rochesterhills.org.

Yes, it was just a short blurb.

Stay safe! Julie

Hi Julie!!

Hope all is well. I don't think I could get to this correctly. It was really small and I don't know if it had to be opened?
Thanks!

Comment:

Perhaps the HDC/HDSC folks would be interested in this article.
