

PRELIMINARY HISTORIC DISTRICT STUDY COMMITTEE REPORT
920 SOUTH BOULEVARD
ROCHESTER HILLS, MICHIGAN

CHARGE OF THE HISTORIC DISTRICTS STUDY COMMITTEE

The Historic Districts Study Committee was appointed by Rochester Hills City Council on December 15, 1999, pursuant to the Rochester Hills Code of Ordinances, Chapter 118, as amended in 1999. The Study Committee is a standing committee charged with conducting the duties and activities of a study committee on a continuing basis. These duties include inventory, research, and preparation of a preliminary historic district study committee report for a proposed historic district. Study Committee Members serve two year terms. A list of current Committee Members follows.

STUDY COMMITTEE MEMBERS

John Dziurman, a registered architect with a practice focused on historic preservation, meets the federal professional qualification standards for historic architect. He has served on the Rochester Hills Historic Districts Commission for fifteen years, many of those years as chairperson.

Peggy Schodowski has strong background in research and analysis, and is currently employed part-time as a Marketing Director/Research Analyst for a locally owned company. She has recently provided research assistance to a local private school regarding the historic background of their school building, and has also assisted several local communities with research about historic buildings.

Michael Sinclair is a member of the Rochester Hills Historic Districts Commission, and resides in a historic home. He undertook the restoration of his ca. 1830 home that had been vacant and neglected for over twenty years, and has extensively researched his property and the beginning settlements of the Community.

Richard Stamps is associate professor of anthropology at Oakland University. A professional archaeologist with a strong interest in history, he is also a member of the Rochester Hills Historic Districts Commission.

Jason Thompson is Chairperson of the Historic Districts Study Committee, and is a member of the Rochester Hills Historic Districts Commission. He has received a Bachelor's Degree in History from Oakland University, and a Masters of Public Administration from Oakland University. His academic and work activities include a strong background in research and grant writing.

Lavere Webster is an art and antiques conservator who lives in one of the city's designated local historic districts. He has served on the board of directors of the Rochester-Avon Historical Society for more than six years.

Pamela Whateley is a minister and healing counselor interested in the city's building and development. She served for two years on the subcommittee for the City's Earl Borden Historic Preservation Award.

INVENTORY

A photographic inventory of the proposed district was conducted in 2002 as part of the Rochester Hills Historic Districts Survey. Copies of the inventory forms are located at the Rochester Hills Planning Department, the Rochester Hills Museum, and the State Historic Preservation Office. A review of the site by Committee Member Dziurman in August, 2006 included several photographs, copies of which are attached.

Additional “windshield” survey work was conducted in February, 2007, by members of the study committee with assistance from Kristine M. Kidorf to identify additional Colonial Revival style properties within the City of Rochester Hills. Copies of the inventory forms are located at the Rochester Hills Planning Department. Survey forms with updated photographs of properties not in designated historic districts have also been included.

DESCRIPITON OF THE DISTRICT

920 South Boulevard is located in the southwest corner Section 34 and consists of a two story house and a small storage shed on lot that is approximately 2.5 acres. The property is primarily flat and the house is setback slightly from South Boulevard. There are large deciduous and evergreen trees between the house and the road, and the rear of the lot has a large number of trees. A small storage shed is on the east side of the property and a gravel driveway enters the site between the house and the shed.

The Colonial Revival style two and half story, side gable house with Craftsman details, faces South Boulevard, has a rectangular footprint, with a one-story ell on the west gable end, and a one-story addition to the east gable end. The house and west ell sit on a raised foundation of decorative concrete block that resembles rusticated stone. The symmetrical five bay wide front façade has a center entrance with a single door flanked on each side with a narrow double hung window as sidelights. The one bay wide gable pedimented front porch roof is supported by pillars, has a dentil cornice and cornice returns. The pediment contains a decorative splay design.

All of the symmetrically arranged windows are double hung with four vertical panes in the upper sash and one pane in the lower sash. Each bay has one window at the first and second floor with the tops of the second floor windows at the eave and the center window above the entrance being shorter. The asphalt covered gable roof has brick chimneys near both ends.

The flat roofed one story ell on the west end appears to be original and there are remnants of a balustrade on the house wall above the roof. There is a group of three double hung windows in the center of the ell’s front wall. The west elevation has a three-sided bay containing windows on all sides, and the main house has a door and one window at the second floor, and two narrow double hung windows in the attic placed above the door and window.

The back of the house has a central door covered with a shed roof porch next to a one story gable roof structure to access the basement door. Double hung windows are located on both sides, and the second floor contains three matching windows spaced equally in the center of the second floor. The west ell has a rectangular shaped window in the center.

The east end of the house has a one story gable roof sunroom addition. It has a brick base with one over one double hung windows surrounding all three sides and a door in the center of the gable end that accesses a set of steps. The second floor of the main house has two windows and there is a single centered window in the attic.

The one story gable roof shed is located to the north east of the house and is rectangular in form with a one story shed roof addition to the north. The shed has vertical wood siding and an asphalt covered roof. The west gable end has two swing-out doors. The addition on the north side has corrugated metal walls and roof. There is a small window opening on the north side. The shed is in fair to poor condition.

RESOURCE LIST:

House – Contributing – A two-story, five bay wide, side gabled house with artificial siding, and a one story original ell at the west end. A small one story addition is located at the east end. Other than the siding, a missing balustrade on the ell, and the east addition the house does not appear to have changed from its original construction. Unknown construction date, but estimated around 1923.

Shed – Non-contributing - The site currently contains a one-story gable roof storage building. The structure has swing doors and vertical wood siding. The date of construction is unknown but it appears to be newer than the house.

COUNT OF HISTORIC AND NON-HISTORIC RESOURCES:

The proposed 920 South Boulevard Historic District contains one historic (contributing) and one non-historic (non-contributing) resource.

BOUNDARY DESCRIPTION

The proposed 920 South Boulevard Historic District consists of the following parcel:

15-34-352-012

Further described as: Town 3 North, Range 11 East, Section 34, Part of the southwest one-quarter of the southwest one-quarter; Beginning at a point on the South section line East 331.28 feet; from the southwest section corner; thence North 88-35-00 East 325 feet; on section line; thence North 04-48-00 West 337.99 feet; thence South 88-35-00 West 325 feet; thence South 04-48-00 East 337.99 feet; to the Point of Beginning; 2.52 acres

BOUNDARY JUSTIFICATION

The proposed 920 South Boulevard Historic District, located in Section 34, consists of one parcel containing the land historically associated with the property. The area to the north is residentially developed; the property to the south (across South Boulevard) is in the City of Troy and contains a senior health care facility; the property immediately adjacent to the east is residential, and the parcel immediately adjacent to the west is a vacant parcel zoned residential. The age of the surrounding properties is significantly newer than the house at 920 South Boulevard, primarily being constructed in the 1970s and later.

HISTORY OF THE DISTRICT

The two and a half acres currently comprising 920 South Boulevard were originally part of an eighty acre property originally deeded from the United States Government to M. Olmstead in 1819. The 1872 atlas shows a house at approximately the same location as the existing house as part of a fifty seven acre parcel belonging to J.C. Runyan who had acquired the property in 1866 and owned it until 1897. In 1923 Walter W. Smith purchased the fifty seven acre parcel and in 1924 he sold the three and a half acres containing 920 South Boulevard to Louis and Francis Wardowski. The lot size was five hundred feet by 337.99 feet.

In 1924 Walter Smith, Arthur Bassett, and Levi L. Barbour, mortgagee, platted the Basset & Smith Flowing Spring Acres No. 1 subdivision surrounding the three and a half acre parcel containing 920 South Boulevard with three streets and forty eight lots. It was accepted by the Avon Township Board in March of 1924, and recorded in the Oakland County Register of Deed's Office in May, 1925.

The house on the property is listed in the city assessor's records as being built in 1910. A survey by Gerald Yurk and Associates states that the house on the property burned down in 1920, and was replaced with the current structure. No documentation was provided to verify this survey.

If the house was built in 1910 it was built by Horatio Hovey who purchased the larger fifty seven acre parcel in 1904. If it was built in 1920, the property was owned by Minnie C. Booth, a single woman from Detroit who owned the larger parcel of property from 1915 until 1923. Ms. Booth is listed as being from Detroit both when she purchased and when she sold the property, possibly indicating that she never lived there. More than likely, the house was built about 1923 by Louis and Francis Wardowski, after the three and a half acre parcel was split off. The Wardowski's owned the property until 1935. From 1935 the property was owned by three different owners until 1953 when it was sold to the current owners. A sale of the property in 1946 reduced the parcel by about an acre to two and half acres.

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE DISTRICT

The Colonial Revival style has been diverse and enduring in twentieth century America and Avon Township followed suit. Surveyed houses, dating from the late 1910s to the late 1940s, include Cape Cod cottages, gambrel roof Dutch Colonials, and two story side gabled houses derived from the New England Large. At the high end of the spectrum is Lawnridge Hall, 1385 S. Adams Road, designed for prominent lumberman and insurance broker Donald C. Wilson by architect J. Ivan Dyce. Completed ca. 1930, this large, picturesque house has a central projecting pedimented pavilion and details such as dormer and multi-pane windows, large brick chimneys, and a recessed side entry with arches.

The Colonial Revival style encompasses remodeling as well as new construction. A good example of this is the mill house historically associated with Winkler Mill, built ca. 1835–40 as a simple New England 1 ½ cottage with frieze windows. Colonial Revival style living room and dining room additions made during the 1920s and 1930s include a large living room fireplace, stairway with curved railing and turned newel post, and arched glass fronted china cabinets. The city's premier example of a Colonial Revival style remodeling is undoubtedly the Van Hoosen Farm House, remodeled by Sarah Van Hoosen Jones with her mother Alice and aunt Bertha Van Hoosen in 1926 and 1927. The Nathaniel Millerd House, the house that Sarah built for farm manager Morris Place in 1936, and their farm store,

At the Sign of the Black and White Cow, are all examples of existing Colonial Revival style houses in the city.<sup>1</sup>

The property at 920 South Boulevard appears to be one of the most intact vernacular Colonial Revival style houses in the City of Rochester Hills. Artificial siding and an addition has been added to the house, but the original form, windows, and Colonial Revival style front porch remain on the house. The house is also somewhat unusual architecturally because of the Craftsman style windows. One other house in the city at 1840 Crestline is noted as having the same style combination.

The house at 1171 East Auburn Road is remarkably similar in its massing and foundation material. It has a two story side gable with a flat roof one story ell on the west gable end. The windows are the more traditional six over one, but have identical trim. The siding is a similar wide artificial siding, and there is a pedimented front porch. The columns and detailing on the porch are different, and the door sidelights take a more traditional form.

In addition to the 2002 survey effort, a windshield survey was conducted by members of the Study Committee to identify other Colonial Revival style houses in the City of Rochester Hills. These two surveys identified a total of twenty five Colonial Revival style houses, ten of which were built since 1965, and seven were built from about 1920 through 1950. The remaining eight houses have estimated construction dates between 1840 and 1920. Only two of the eight properties have survived intact, the Van Hoosen Museum at 1005 Van Hoosen Road and the former store at 1081 E. Tienken which are located in the Stoney Creek Historic District. The others have various changes including artificial siding, newer replacement windows, and newer additions.

Out of the 22,415 residential structures currently existing in the City of Rochester Hills, only three late 19th century or early 20th century examples of the Colonial Revival style appear to remain intact. It is also significant that this house is one of the three houses originally built on South Boulevard, the main road between the City of Pontiac to the west and the City of Utica to the east. All three of those houses still exist today.

The National Register Criteria

The quality of significance in American history, architecture, archaeology, engineering, and culture is present in districts, sites, buildings, structures, and objects that possess integrity of location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association, and:

C. that embody the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction, or that represent the work of a master, or that possess high artistic values, or that represent a significant and distinguishable entity whose components may lack individual distinction.

The house appears to meet criterion C as a fairly intact example of a vernacular Colonial Revival style house with Craftsman details. There are approximately eight other Colonial Revival style houses from this period in the City of Rochester Hills, however none have the exact massing and detailing of the house at 920 South Boulevard which is a combination of Colonial Revival and Craftsman style detailing.
