Papa Joe's is asking for 3 licenses from the city's remaining quota of 6 available Class C licenses. The requests being made are for Papa Joe's and Curtis Properties. The application paperwork indicates that in the future they would have co-licensees and would amend the licenses at that time. The site is not yet under construction as there are site plan issues to be resolved.

City Council placed a moratorium on issuing new licenses from the quota in 2003. That moratorium expired at the end of the year. Council was recommending that businesses interested in obtaining Class C licenses should perhaps seek to purchase and transfer a license that is currently held in escrow. The city has several businesses that have placed their licenses in escrow; at this time there are 6 in escrow. Should this be the direction to take for the requests from Papa Joe's? If granted as applied for, the city's quota would be reduced to 3 available Class C licenses through the 2010 census report. Your thoughts?
