Bricks and Mortar

A grant program to build facilities and to challenge private giving.

Introduction

The Kresge Foundation is known for making grants for capital projects. However, we believe a challenge grant toward an organization's capital project does more than just build a building or reward good programs. It presents an opportunity to build institutional capacity by helping an organization broaden and deepen its base of support from the private sector and by encouraging volunteer involvement in the fund raising effort and beyond.

In reading this pamphlet, the prospective applicant should know that we look very closely at this opportunity. How has the capital campaign been strategically planned to build on your organization's fund raising strengths and address your fund raising weaknesses? After all the pledges to your campaign have been paid, how do you expect this effort will have strengthened your organization's development activities? Does your campaign seek gifts from new donors and increased gifts from previous donors? How will the donors to the capital campaign be retained and their gift support sustained for future annual operating needs?

When a capital program truly succeeds, it leaves in its wake a stronger board and a giving constituency that is broader and deeper. Both will be useful to the organization when it faces the inevitable challenges and opportunities that occur when not in a capital campaign.

General Information and Eligibility

The Kresge Foundation, an independent, private foundation, was created in 1924 by Sebastian S. Kresge. Although Mr. Kresge also founded the S.S. Kresge Company, now known as Kmart, the Foundation is not affiliated or associated with that or any other corporation or organization.
